that lesson had been learned, we hope that ordinary business will be resumed as quickly as possible.

OUR GROWING TAXES.

It would seem no good purpose to discuss whether next year will see Australia the most highly-taxed country in the world. For the thing no one, except perhaps Mr. McGowen and his colleagues, knows what our taxation is to be proposed in the forthcoming State Budget. All we know is that the Government has introduced its revised Income Tax Act, in the direction of making that tax much heavier than at present. We know, furthermore, that the cost of government is increasing month by month, that new offices are being created, and that we are passed that involve more or less expenditure. The result is that the Government's revenue has diminished. Take the results of the financial year that closed June 30 last as illustrative of the State situation. Here we find that the revenue was £4,700,933, or by nearly 5 per cent. less than the expenditure increased by £474,502, or by over one per cent. The backward move of £1,548,435 for the twelve months. It is clear as possible that something must be done, and done quickly, to restore the equilibrium between diminishing receipts and growing disbursements. The Government has three possible means of restoration, and three only. It may take steps to restore the balance by swelling the re-ture, that is, by increasing taxation; or may restore it by reducing expenditure, which at present there would appear to be slight prospect. The third possible course is to increase the revenue by increasing receipts so as to partially make the balance, and then reduce disbursements so as to account for the rest of the deficit. All we are certain of at present is that expenditure is still increasing, and at further taxation is still increased. It is quite apart from the State aspect of the question, there is the Federal aspect. The Government has been for some time past completing the process of extracting an unwilling £1,300,000 of additional taxes upon the land-owning class. It certainly at the moment has no new form of taxation that we know of in prospect, but it is exceedingly rapid along the route that it has chosen to take, and necessary, and it is spending money with a free hand, and prospering times that we have been experiencing of late have so increased the spending power of the people that imports of dutiable goods have yielded most dutiable Customs have yielded most indomitably to the Federal Treasury. The Government has been able to increase its revenue. We thus find the Federal Government with a substantial surplus, and a substantial surplus inevitably means a tax on the people upon the national spending apparatus. Political heads are seldom endowed with an economical view, which is perhaps natural enough, seeing that the

The inspector gives his telephone number as 6-7089, saying that when business is brisk no attendant should have more than 100 calls to attend to. The intervening staff being relieved. In black times, when there are fewer calls after 200 or more, the comment was made in connection with call when over six minutes elapsed any answering or supervision. The superintendent said a complaint had been made of a remarkable American occurrence of the inspector was the too well-occurrence of a conversation being while trying to obtain a number. There was also a lady heard speaking to a gentleman who said she did not know how to know that her conversation was "id," remarks the inspector.

deep, but from the collective, purse, which is deep, and can so easily be tapped by legislative effort. Over and above State and Federal taxation, however, there is a local government taxation to be considered. The local rates, which are usually disbursed by the local authorities, are not levied on the ground, on all-fours such taxes which do not necessarily returned in any form to the locality from which they come, yet the rate increase in rates of late years is still a burden that has to be put up with, even gradually. It is true that the municipal rates levied in this State are still low compared with those levied, for instance, in some of the suburbs of London and England, and in provincial towns. They are none the less high when placed in juxtaposition to the services rendered. Taking it all in all, the taxation—Federal, State, and municipal—has increased so alarmingly that when the next period of depression arrives, which it will be severely felt, more especially by the poorer classes, who, though they hold no land, nevertheless pay land taxes; who, though their incomes are low as to be exempted, nevertheless pay income tax; and who, though they merely occupy and do not own property, still pay rates on this by the process of "passing them on."

certainly does break bread good, earnestly and sound finance. The past year the bank's contribution has paid 3 per cent. to the Government, and the depositors of £50,000 at 3 per cent. represent a contribution of £1,500, having regard, of course, to special provisions for the benefit of any man or woman in the world outside the position who is a holder of the savings bank's bank. The manager this bank got last year of the fact even before it was evolved in the way of deposits was that depositors were not using an institution that deserves to be. The number of deposits made in 1906, being an increase of 100,000, was a year of 15,000 deposits. It was then consulted by the Government. We know that the capital has been made out of the was not a larger number of the savings bank. The manager before Mr. Carmichael's problem, did one single depositor, one single depositor made a deposit at the bank should be a single depositor. Mr. Carmichael also over the Savings Bank Act the empowered to advance money to the districts for the purpose of houses. That is a very excellent thing. Mr. Carmichael is a member of the Savings Bank Act, and a member of that fund. There are which seems to understand the well known that the Bank's bank has made advances on the basis of the present value of the present value of the bank with a margin of 10 per cent. of the present value of the bank.

For nearly two months a strike of sugar workers has been in progress in Queensland, and little by little, like some Indian disease, the trouble has spread until there is some fear of a war upon a serious scale, affecting many interests outside the sugar industry. The origin of the trouble is not far to seek. A certain number of workers in the northern State who at the beginning of the crushing season suddenly ascertained that the time was opportune for making demands from the mill proprietors and the cane-growers in regard to an increase of wages and a shortening of the hours of work. It is in the sugar economy of Queensland that certain ambitious representatives of labour that the moment has arisen for a step in advance should coincide with the moment when labour was most urgently needed. As a purely strategic movement of men who are utterly indifferent to the rights of others, or callous to the welfare of their country, it is not surprising that the strike should have proceeded to the point when such a proceeding might be deemed to be most effective for their purpose. The Queensland sugar workers have not, however, succeeded in paralysing the industry, for a steady stream of new labour has been pouring into the districts in accordance with the result that only by the mills and the mills into production, and, in spite of difficulties, crushing has gone on. Thwarted in their immediate objective, the usual process has been followed of involving other ferences of labour in the trouble, and the Minister of Agriculture seems to indicate that the waterside workers and Seamen of United Kingdom will be asked to lend a hand in this attempt to stop the wheels of industry. The demands of the men on strike now gathered in camps in various parts of Queensland, and most recently formulated, are an all-round eighty hours day and certain increases in rates of wages that will enable them to support their families and other commands in any part of Australia, or, for the matter of that, anywhere in the world.

The sugar industry is differentiated from other forms of enterprise, in that it is directly under the control of the Federal Government and the relation between employer and employed is conditioned by the Government, whereas in other industries it is granted. Immediately there is any question of these regulations on the part of the cane-growers, the Minister has it in his power to withhold the bounty pending full inquiry into each case of alleged violation. It is highly significant that Mr. McEwen received a telegram from the cane-growers' employers, and not until the men had got into the hole they had dug themselves were the Minister's services called to get them out again. Mr. McEwen's visit to Queensland has not endangered the situation for the better, and the war for which there was no justification on any reasonable cause still goes on. Besides the

NATIONAL INSURANCE.

THE BILL IN COMMITTEE.

UNEMPLOYED CONTRIBUTORS.

LONDON, July 20.

In the House of Commons last night the National Insurance Bill was further considered in committee.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer, Mr. Lloyd George, was greatly harassed by critics of the measure on the Liberal and Labour benches asking for more concessions.

An amendment moved by Mr. H. B. L. Smith (Liberal) aroused a good deal of interest. Its aim was to relieve a contributor falling into arrears through unemployment from his liability to make good the arrears of contribution, which the employers would have paid had he been working.

Mr. Smith predicted that if the contribution were compelled to pay his arrears before regaining the benefits of the scheme, the bill would be a failure.

In this connection he contended that the State should grant £100,000.

Mr. Lloyd George said that the State was not able to bear this additional burden. The proposal was impracticable, and would encourage the thriftless.

Mr. A. J. Shaw (Liberal) said that the Chancellor of the Exchequer was depriving the millions of their due. The insurance amendment were accepted the poor and destitute would be badly disappointed.

Sir Charles Cripps (Unionist), Mr. W. R. Peel (Unionist), Mr. George Harwood (Independent Liberal), and Mr. A. S. Rowland (Liberal) pressed Mr. Lloyd George to make the concession.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer then proposed a compromise—viz., that the friendly societies should be given the right to pay the contributions which, in ordinary cases, would have been paid by the employers.

Mr. J. B. Macdonald, Leader of the Labour party, strenuously opposed this, declaring that the State ought to come to the assistance of the unemployed contributors.

Mr. Lloyd George refused to yield, and warned the Liberals that if the amendment were carried it might mean the defeat of the bill, but also the defeat of the Government.

The amendment was negatived by 163 to 116.

Afterwards Mr. Lloyd George's compromise was agreed to by 219 to 77.

M.C.O.F. CRITICISM.

LONDON, July 20.

The Manchester Unity Order of Oddfellows has resolved that Mr. Lloyd George's refusal to allow sick pay for the first three days of illness under the National Insurance Bill is most detrimental to the friendly societies, and will possibly lead to their ruin.

The opinion in Manchester attributes his inaction in Persia to collusion or gross carelessness on the part of the Russian authorities.

Russia has been opposing the reform of the Persian Government, and the appointment of Major Stokes, the British Military Attaché, as organizer of the fiscal department.

THE WHITE PLAGUE.

WAR OF EXTERMINATION.

WORK IN GREAT BRITAIN.

LONDON, July 20.

Mr. John Burns, President of the Local Government Board, in opening the Conference of the National Association for the Prevention of Consumption, stated that the disease during the past ten years had decreased 19 per cent. in England and Wales, 24 per cent. both in Scotland and Ireland, and 20 per cent. in London. There were two deaths from consumption in London compared with every three in Berlin, and five in Paris.

Consumption and tuberculosis, he said, were diminishing forces, and experts believed that their annihilation ought to be effected in 25 years.

LABOUR CONFERENCE.

AN EMPIRE MOVEMENT.

INTERCHANGE OF VIEWS.

LONDON, July 19.

The Parliamentary Labour party's conference with the Overseas Labour party, which was held today, when it was resolved to organise a secretariat with headquarters in each of the Dominions and at home to arrange for the interchange of information by mail, and, if necessary, by cablegram.

It will also arrange for the interchange of visits, the selection of delegations, and their utilization for enlightening public opinion, demonstrating the solidarity of the labour movement, and the holding of periodical conferences on labour questions in places within the Empire.

Mr. J. Ramsay MacDonald presided at the conference of Labour members of Parliament yesterday, and among the members present were Messrs. J. S. T. McGowan, D. Bowman, W. G. Spence, T. Brown, A. Poynton, W. O. Archibald, W. H. P. Molyneux, W. H. Smith, and J. J. Long.

Mr. Lloyd George refused to yield, and warned the Liberals that if the amendment were carried it might mean the defeat of the bill, but also the defeat of the Government.

The amendment was negatived by 163 to 116.

Afterwards Mr. Lloyd George's compromise was agreed to by 219 to 77.

M.C.O.F. CRITICISM.

LONDON, July 20.

The Manchester Unity Order of Oddfellows has resolved that Mr. Lloyd George's refusal to allow sick pay for the first three days of illness under the National Insurance Bill is most detrimental to the friendly societies, and will possibly lead to their ruin.

The opinion in Manchester attributes his inaction in Persia to collusion or gross carelessness on the part of the Russian authorities.

Russia has been opposing the reform of the Persian Government, and the appointment of Major Stokes, the British Military Attaché, as organizer of the fiscal department.
